FATHERS ASS'N OPENS ITS SEASON WITH A DINNER MEETING

Fifty Men Attend First Session Of The Present School Year

WARREN GIFT SPEAKER

Interesting Talk Given On The Making of Crystalite and Its Uses

The first meeting of the Fathers Association of the Bristol Public Schools for the school year 1941-1942 was held last evening in the high school cafeteria. Fifty men were present and Thomas A. Coles presided.

The evening opened with a dinner served by a group of women and the following was the menu: Tomato juice, baked beans, potato salad, cold boiled ham, rolls, butter, coffee, tea, ice cream, cakes and cigars. Dr. John J. Hargrave asked the blessing.

The activities of the Bristol Adult School were reviewed by Paul V. Foster, Esq., who stated that much credit for the success of the school was due to Thomas Coles and other members of the Fathers Association.

"Twelve subjects were taught last year," said Mr. Foster. "This year the plans call for twenty subjects. The sessions of the school will start in October."

Warren P. Snyder, school superintendent, spoke on the opening of the schools for the school term and reviewed what part the Bristol public schools are playing in national defense.

Mr. Snyder stated that during the past several years the number of pupils in the elementary grades had been declining but that he was of the opinion that it had now reached a level and in a few years would begin showing an increase. He predicted that in about 1947 the number of children in the elementary grades would begin to increase. He also mentioned that an increase had been shown in the high school enrollment.

Mr. Snyder asked that the members of the Fathers Association give thought to some of the problems facing the schools such as caring for an expected influx of residents into either Bristol or the adjacent area.

Clarence Bartholomew, newly elected coach of the Bristol high school, spoke briefly and said that the boys appeared to be much interested and that every effort would be made to place a good team on the field.

Warren Gift, engineer in charge of the crystalite department at the Rohm & Haas plant, was the speaker of the evening and he gave a very interesting and informative talk, which was illustrated with colored drawings and also with stereopticon pictures and specimens of articles made of crystalite.

Mr. Gift spoke as follows: "I suppose everyone in Bristol knows something about Plexiglas. Everywhere I go I see pieces of it in people's homes. Crystalite, although it is every bit as beautiful and decorative as Plexiglas, has not for several reasons received the general attention of the townspeople.

"The reasons for this are probably (1) Crystalite is a much younger Rohm & Haas resin, and (2) the application of Plexiglas to the airplane has given it wide recognition. The impetus given it by the war has made it an astounding business.

"The end-product of Crystalite is a clear transparent object much the same as Plexiglas. The inexperienced person would regard them as one and the same thing. It is my purpose tonight to show how it is used and some of the objects made from it.

"Before doing so I want to tell you something of the origin of our plastics. Crystalite belongs to a field of organic chemicals referred to as the acrylic resins. In popular terminology they are organic materials which can be readily molded and formed into a wide variety of articles of commerce. They are the product of the skill and imagination of the organic chemist and the plastic technologists, and are 'nature improved upon' or 'nature done one better.'

"Constituted of atoms of carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen which are obtainable from coal, air and water, the nature of their structure is such that they have none of the apparent properties of any of these materials. Instead they are our nearest approach to man's ancient dream of 'unbreakable glass.' In fact, they surpass ordinary glass in clarity and freedom from color.

"Crystalite differs considerably from Plexiglas in the form in which it is

AWARDED SWEATER

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 18—Hugh B. Eastburn, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh B. Eastburn, Bristol, Pa., a member of the class of '42, Brown University, is one of five Brown undergraduates who were managers of intramural sports teams last year, and who have been awarded special sweaters for efficiency in arranging their team games. Eastburn attended South Kent School in Connecticut, before attending Brown.

Miss Rosemarie Paone, Dorrance street, was tendered a surprise lingerie shower on Tuesday evening, it being planned by her attendants-to-be, Miss Yolondo Monachello, Miss Mary Henry, Bristol; and Miss Mary Zuchero, Tullytown.

The room was attractive with decorations of pink and blue. Dancing was enjoyed, and a buffet supper partaken of by: the Misses Grace and Josephine Bono, Rose Pinelli, Frances and Jennie Luppino, Gilda Mosco, Grace Caro, Patricia, Lily and Katharine Yaniro, Lucy Clamabelli, Josephine Sinacore, Anna Ferrara, Rose and Mary Spez-zano, Carmella Capella, Angeline Verme, Anna Sottile, Bristol; Mildred, Booz, Edgely.

EASTERN PENNA. MOOSE NAME THEIR OFFICERS

Elect Allentown Man As President of Association At Recent Meeting

ARRANGE FOR BANQUET

SELLERSVILLE, Sept. 18—J. F. Hardner, Allentown, was elected president of the Eastern Pennsylvania Moose Association at a meeting held in the headquarters of Sellersville Lodge, No. 1539, Sunday.

The meeting was attended by nearly 150 members, and in conjunction with the men's session there was a meeting of the Women of the Moose, who also elected officers for the Eastern District Association.

J. Fred Ricker, Jr., Easton, president of the organization for the past year, had charge of the business session.

In addition to Mr. Hardner, the following officers were elected: Frank Gwind, Allentown, vice president; Raymond Messimer, Pottstown, secretary, and Charles Nase, Quakertown, treasurer.

Officers of the Women of the Moose of the Eastern Pennsylvania district are as follows: Mrs. Nellie Rice, Bangor, president; Mrs. Sadie Nase, Sellersville, vice president, and Mrs. Jessie Clouser, Pottstown, secretary-treasurer.

Plans were made by the women to hold a banquet for their husbands during October. The next district meeting will be held at Catawqua Lodge, No. 1362, in October.

J. Paul Bergey, secretary of the Sellersville Lodge, officiated at the installation of the new officers.

President Ricker gave a report on the recent Moose convention in Easton, to which he was a delegate.

Raymond Schweiker Given Gifts at Surprise Affair

CROYDON, Sept. 18—In Fellowship Hall of Wilkinson Memorial Methodist Church, Tuesday evening, a birthday party was given in honor of Raymond Schweiker's 21st anniversary. Raymond attended the Ushers' Association meeting, and was surprised when a group walked in singing "Happy Birthday."

The table was trimmed with flowers, and Arthur Wilkinson in a short talk told of appreciation of Mr. Schweiker's services. He is teacher of a boys' class in the Sunday School, this group also being present.

Sixty relatives and friends enjoyed an entertainment. Miss Fanny McNutt was pianist; and the soloists were Mrs. Walter Rice and Miss Rherna Leary. Sketches were presented by the Rev. George C. Lurwick, Doran Edwards, Ralston Hedrick and Howard Coombs. "The Honey-moon" and "Gathering The Nuts" were presented. A game was won by Arthur Wilkinson.

Ice cream, coffee, cake, nuts and candy were served by the Ladies' Aid members.

Gifts presented to Mr. Schweiker by the Rev. Lurwick from the members, included a Bible with a zipper case, and a gold tie pin set.

A watch was presented the honored guest by his father; an automobile by his mother; an initial ring by his God-father and God-mother, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Bergner, Frankford.

Houston Dunn, Jr., Files Action For A Divorce

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18—Houston Dunn, Jr., Sunbury Farm, near Bristol, yesterday came into Common Pleas Court to file suit for divorce against his wife. He charged cruel treatment and indignities.

The divorce action marked the second time in seven years that the Duns have aired their marital differences in court. In 1934 Mrs. Dunn sued for divorce in Norristown, but a reconciliation was effected and the case was dropped.

The younger Dunn's chicken farm, on which stands a 22-room, two-century-old mansion, is said to be one of the most modern and scientific in the country, operating on a "streamlined" basis.

Mrs. Dunn kept the books and handled other business affairs for her husband. They have a five-year-old daughter.

Mrs. Ernest M. Lawrence, Sr., Radcliffe street, is enjoying a stay at Chalfonte-Haddon Hall, Atlantic City, N. J.

Nazi Forces Retreat

London, Sept. 18—Nazi forces have retreated nine miles after an important Russian victory on one sector of the Leningrad front, the Leningrad radio declared today.

"Our men are fighting with the knowledge that they won't be able to return to Leningrad except as victors," the Russian radio said.

Crimea Cut Off

London, Sept. 18—British military officials took a gloomy view of fighting on the southern front today, declaring it appeared that Crimea had been cut off from the Russian mainland by the German advance, and that Red supplies would have to be sent on a vulnerable water route, via Rostov.

The Germans were said to be exerting extreme pressure in their drive against Murmansk, and were declared to be making some progress in this area.

U. S. Planes Arrive in Russia

Washington, Sept. 18—Responsible quarters in Washington today disclosed that the first consignment of American-made warplanes has arrived in Soviet Russia.

Representing one of the most important steps yet taken by the U. S. Government to aid Soviet Russia, arrival of this first consignment is expected to be followed by a steady flow of hundreds of warplanes from both this country and Great Britain.

Details concerning the number and type of planes in this batch is considered a military secret which cannot be made public.

Mine Workers Continue Strike

Hazleton, Sept. 18—Twenty-two thousand insurgent members of the UMWA gave no indication today of ending the walk-out that has curtailed production in Pennsylvania's anthracite fields for the last nine days.

The miners have threatened not to return to work until union leaders lift the $10 increase in dues and assessments voted in a national referendum.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

With Doylestown Borough Council and other municipal offices of the County Seat scheduled to move into new headquarters in the near future, the need for the establishment of public rest rooms in Doylestown was discussed Monday night at the monthly meeting of Council.

Whether rest rooms could be provided in the basement of what will be the new headquarters for Borough offices in the Hart Building on Main street, could not be definitely learned last night, but every member of Council expressed the opinion that rest rooms are badly needed and should be provided if the expense is not prohibitive.

An agreement drawn up by George Hart, owner of the building to be occupied by the borough offices when alterations have been completed, and Council, was signed last night. The agreement covers a period of 10 years and includes stipulations concerning the amount of rental and heating of the building.

The monthly report of Chief of Police Felix R. Gowan was read by Councilman Justin H. Ely, chairman of the police committee. The report showed a total of $306 in fines collected for the borough and $50 in fines for the county. Eighty-two complaints were received and appropriate action was taken in each case. Twenty-eight warnings were issued and 13 accidents were investigated.

There were 35 arrests made during the period from August 18th to September 15th, as follows: Overweights, 17; disorderly conduct, 6; trespassing, 4; drunk and disorderly, 4; driving wrong way on one-way street, 2; reckless driving, 1; passing and driving on wrong side of street, 1. Disposition of cases: Pending, 13; reprimanded and discharged, 8; paid fines and costs, 13; sentenced to 30 days in the County Prison, 1.

HOUSE IS QUARANTINED

The first case of poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis), was reported here last night to the Bristol Board of Health.

The victim is Joseph Lattanzi, two years of age, who resides on Penn street.

The house has been quarantined and all of the other children in the family ordered to remain out of school and prohibited from attending public gatherings or contacting other children in any manner, whatever.

The district representative of the State Department of Health has been notified of the case.

Drowned Lad Buried Here; Six Lads Are Pall-Bearers

Six students from St. Mark's parochial school, young boys who knew Donald Johnson, seven, who met death by drowning on Monday, served as bearers at Donald's funeral yesterday. The six bearers included some altar boys from St. Mark's R. C. Church.

Funeral service was held at the home of the lad's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Johnson, 335 Cleveland street, with the Rev. Father Albert Glass of St. Mark's parish, officiating. Interment in St. Mark's Cemetery was in charge of the W. I. Murphy Estate, funeral directors.

The boy drowned in the canal, west of Green Lane, while swimming. He had left a pet dog to guard his clothing on the tow-path, and it was the barking of the dog which drew attention of a fisherman to the floating body of the child.

Appeal For Volunteers To Make Surgical Dressings

GETS JAIL TERM FOR UNLAWFUL USE OF CURRENT

Vito Sinacori, Bristol, is Sentenced to Serve from Two Months To A Year

PLEADED GUILTY

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 18—Pleading guilty to unlawful use of electricity and interference with a device of gas company, Vito Sinacori, 1026 Trenton avenue, Bristol, was heard before President Judge Hiram H. Keller.

The Bristolian was sentenced yesterday in the county court to serve from two months to a year in the Bucks County prison, after pleading guilty to the charge.

The defendant owns three row houses, 1026, 1028 and 1030 Trenton avenue.

Albert P. Smith, Philadelphia Electric Company, a witness for the Commonwealth, testified two investigators found electricity was being used at 1026 Trenton avenue.

They also found that the house at 1030 had been tapped and was supplying current although the meter had been disconnected. Mr. Smith exhibited a hose which was used to "jump" the gas supply from the street main to the pipe leading upstairs. The hose was used in place of a meter and was a hazardous connection.

"He had all modern conveniences without the annoyance of monthly bills," the prosecution pointed out.

A gas meter was removed from the defendant's home in 1933 and investigators could not gain admittance.

An electric service wire from a pole was also disconnected in 1933. The defendant has been living in his home for eight or ten years.

Mr. Smith pointed out that a truck passing by the house on the street might have jarred the gas hose connections loose and an explosion might have resulted, wiping out the entire row of houses.

The defendant also supplied a house at 1024 with electricity because "the woman in that house threatened to squeal on me."

Judge Keller, in addressing his remarks to Sinacori said: "If you were so unfortunate as to be on relief, it didn't give you an excuse to steal, which is what you did when you had your gas and electric meters taken out in 1933, and began tapping power sources. The more serious of the two crimes is your interference with gas mains, because of danger to the neighborhood in which you live."

Sinacori told the judge that he started to tap the mains in April or May of 1941, Judge Keller later in pronouncing sentence informed the defendant that he did not believe that story. "Do you want us to believe that you only tapped those electric lines since May or June?" queried Judge Keller, to which Sinacori replied "You're the judge, Sinacori."

The defendant has a wife, and five children ranging in ages from four to 15 years.

It was brought out in testimony that Sinacori constantly refused to permit Philadelphia Electric Company investigators to enter the house or to go on the premises. Smith, in his testimony, said that shades were pulled down at night and shutters kept closed, so no one outside could note that electric lights were used.

Thirty-six names were called off by Court Crier Louis Moorman, Sr., before a panel of 12 men was finally selected in the case of Horace Sloyer, charged with statutory rape.

Eighteen months to five years in the Eastern State Penitentiary, with a recommendation that he be served at Graterford, was the sentence imposed on James Patrick Newkirk, a dishonorably discharged soldier from the United States Army.

President Judge Hiram H. Keller pronounced sentence after looking over Newkirk's quite lengthy crime record. A jury convicted him yesterday. The charges against him were burglary, larceny and receiving stolen goods. Newkirk stole a suit of clothes, shoes and shirts from the home of Mr. and

DOYLE GETS YEAR IN JAIL AND MUST PAY COSTS OF CASE

Wm. Doyle, Bristol Township, Convicted of Involuntary Manslaughter

JURY HEARD THE CASE

Jury Deliberated 1 1/4 Hours Before Arriving At Verdict

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 18—William Doyle, of Bristol Township, who has been on trial during the past few days in Bucks County court, charged with involuntary manslaughter in the death of Salvatore Tassi, Philadelphia, on June 6th, following an automobile accident, was sentenced by Judge Calvin S. Boyer, yesterday afternoon.

Doyle was sentenced to pay the costs of the case, and to serve not less than one year and not more than three years in the county prison. The jury deliberated one and one-quarter hours.

Paul J. Barrett, Bristol, counsel for the defendant, told the court that Doyle had never been in trouble before, and asked that no prison sentence be imposed, because Doyle was the "sole support of his mother and sister." He would also lose his seniority rights at Rohm & Haas Company plant where he is employed," stated Attorney Barrett.

Judge Boyer said in addressing Doyle: "It is a painful duty for the court to sentence a young man who has never been in any previous trouble, but you have sent a man to eternity through your selfish appetite. The crime of which you were convicted is a very clear case of drunken driving. You were different from most drivers. You went from place to place, and kept on drinking for six hours or more. We have been punishing drunken drivers for years, and yet men read in the newspapers every day what happens to men who drink and drive cars. They pay no attention to it, and then they get into trouble like you have. This is an exceedingly serious offense. In fact it is next door to murder."

Doyle, who complained to the court about having "pains in the guts," was assured by Judge Boyer that when he arrived at the county prison the prison physician would take good care of him.

Tassi, the victim in the crash involving his car and one operated by Doyle, was an employee of Fleetwings, Inc. At the time of the accident, it was brought out in testimony that Tassi's mother and sister, both employees at the Starkey Farms, near Morrisville, were asleep in the car.

Doyle had testified in court that the accident on Bristol Pike, in which Tassi met his death, occurred after he (Doyle) had visited several tap-rooms in and near Bristol, drinking a number of glasses of beer.

Although his defense was that a friend, Tony, was driving his car at the time of the collision, William H. Honore, 50, 1422 North Fifteenth street, Philadelphia, was convicted of drunken driving and also of operating a car after his operator's license had been revoked, by a jury in less than a quarter of an hour on Monday afternoon.

The defendant, whose counsel, John L. DuBois, made a motion for a new trial, has a police record, including sentences served for drunken driving and burglary.

Because of his record, Judge Calvin S. Boyer set his bail for release from the County Prison pending the filing of the motion for a new trial at $2,000 or its equal in securities.

The defendant, an interior decorator, who was arrested by Officer C. Clifford Beck on July 12th, following a two-car accident on the Easton Road, in front of the flower gardens, admitted that his driver's license had been suspended April 15th because of drunken driving.

When apprehended by two men, Robert Anderson, 329 South Main street, and Rudolph Shively, 327 South Main street, the tall, lanky defendant was found lying on his back in one of the flower beds at the Burpee show gardens.

In court Monday he insisted that "Tony" fled into the same gardens following the accident. He produced in court two advertisements, one inserted in a Philadelphia metropolitan daily and the other in the "Daily Intelligencer," which were as follows: "Anthony T. please communicate with me with reference to July 11, Bill H."

"My friend and I were driving through the country when we got lost," said the defendant, who explained he didn't know how to spell the last name of his friend of three months' standing.

Dr. Ralph C. Farquhar, Jr., who examined the defendant, gave the most damaging testimony concerning his actions and conduct. "When I asked the defendant what he had to drink," Dr. Farquhar testified, "he said 'that is for you to determine'."

Miss Anna B. Leznick, a passenger in the other car which was struck by the defendant's car, testified she saw the defendant stagger and that he had difficulty in keeping his balance.

TRAINING BEING TESTED

The military training of a half million United States soldiers is being put to the test for a two-week period with the Second Army of 150,000 men under Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear matching strength and strategy with the Third Army of 350,000 men under Lieut. Gen. Walter Krueger.

The battle area for the mock war is huge, comprising 20,000 square miles in North Central Louisiana and East Texas. The terrain is difficult, much of it scrub pineland liberally dotted with swamps. The weather is likely to be rainy, September being regarded as a wet month in that area, turning the dry ground into a viscous goo that paralyzes the usefulness even of tanks. The setting is one to accentuate the importance of holding roads and bridges.

General Lear has the swifter forces and a preponderance of the mechanized weapons which will force him to depend more on the roads should rainy weather come. General Krueger has a superior force so far as numbers are concerned and possesses the advantage of foot soldiers who can make their way through roadless country for raids or quick action in territory where tanks cannot move.

Many who heretofore have failed to follow the progress of war games are vitally interested in the outcome of this huge test of strength. It is the greatest mock war ever staged in America. It is the first major test of recent military training, particularly in the mechanized divisions.

The nation's armed forces have made great progress since the days only a few years ago when the only Army maneuvers staged comprised annual encampments of the National Guard. The Regular Army was so small that its personnel was required to man the forts, etc., and could not be spared for field maneuvers.

HOW FAR ARE THE STARS?

It may upset some of the "certainties" of the science that Prof. Jan Schilt of Columbia University has called an error in the calculations of astronomical distances measured by parallax. He claims to have proved that rays of light coming from stars near the sun are bent slightly out of a straight line by air currents in the higher levels of the earth's atmosphere. These stars, he says, are two or three times closer to the earth than has been believed.

Whether other star-gazers will accept the professor's new theory is doubtful, though he takes in too much territory. Had he discovered one new star, or error in former calculations having to do with one old star, he could expect to be honored and sung. But to tell the scientific world of astronomy that it has been grossly fooled in everything—well, that is going too far.

And the correction will not make much difference to most persons. The nearest star is still an incredible distance away. Astronomical observations and measurements are made after all, at very close range. All a telescope can do is to collect light from the sky on its lens or mirror after which it is again reflected to a human eye. All the observer sees is what literally meets his eye.

Those who study the skies through the largest telescopes can see no farther than the end of their noses.

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

Fan got to Mat, pulling at him; calling. He was still warm. "Please—please not this, Mat—not this—" She couldn't scream. She had no voice.

Then, her frenzied face staring blindly down, she saw the envelope. It was fastened to the under side of the overturned bench; the bench Charlie had always said was her dream rug. She could go anywhere on it, she used to say to Garrison.

Impulsively, Fan snatched up the envelope. It felt like another pulse beating in her hand. It was Charlie's last message to Mat—or to Richard Garrison. Yes, to Garrison. For on its surface was written in Charlie's dashing hand: "For Dick, in case of my death."

Fan listened, tense, and in the silence other ears seemed, also, to be listening as the night slid away. She gazed out of the window, as Breanu had done an hour ago. Central Park drowned uneasily under an October sky.

How had he got back here? How had he escaped? Where were the men who would presently knock on his door, demanding entrance, and find her here, splattered with his blood? What did it matter?

Fan tightened. Someone had come into the foyer. There was no sound, but she felt an ominous presence. It could be Doremus. Mechanically, she bent, still holding the envelope, and took up the sword. "Who's there?" She prayed it would be Dick Garrison, Dave Farland, or the newspaperman, Bill Wright.

The hand with the envelope went to her breast. A man was framed in the doorway, his jaw and shoulders jutting out. He grinned at her across the narrow room.

"Go easy, sister," he said. His hard eyes took in the scene. He chuckled. His thumb jerked toward Breanu. "You've spared a lot of people a heap of trouble. Congratulations." He was staring at the sword in Fan's hand.

She dropped it, as if the stained blade scorched her. She had seen this man before. He was Fred Sweitzer. It was he who had once known Charlie; who had knocked David out in Fan's apartment; and who had beaten poor Anna to death. Sweitzer's greedy eyes were now on the envelope. He held out his hand, nodding with a laconic "Give!"

"I didn't kill him."

"All right, you didn't, baby. But I want those papers you've got. Quick!" Sweitzer edged nearer. "No," Fan said suddenly. "No!"

And she moved away.

"If you know what's good for you, it's 'Yes,' girlie," Sweitzer took his time. This was easy.

But Fan said, "No," again, loudly, as if she expected help. Sweitzer couldn't let her live after that.

His voice roughened as he sidled after her. "Come on, Give!"

Fan looked at his bulky, advancing figure, and ran behind the other grand piano. Its curves sheltered her for a second. Desperately, she looked around the room for another refuge. The carved furniture, damasked Italian chests offered no security.

If she could only gain time! Her mouth was dry and stiff as she smiled the smile that won over so many men. "Let's have a drink first. You'll find the makings in the pantry." She added, "You and I could be friends over a drink, Sweitzer." Then she bit her lip. She never should have let him know she recognized him.

His square head lunged forward between his wide shoulders. "We'll drink later," he said. He moved around the curve of the piano, opposite the one where Breanu lay crumpled and so very still.

Fan dodged. Then the cruel game began, between her and the big, nimble-footed man in that familiar place, where once she had been so happy. No matter how fleet she might be in her stained white, he was ever behind her, almost loitering to give her breath; then after her again, leering, his big hairy hands out.

She thought of the windows. She might reach one of them and jump, rather than give him Charlie's secret. But he divined her rush, and blocked the way. The door, then, to the dining room—or to the foyer. He was there.

But now he wasn't grinning any more. His eyes were sinister. He was on the kill. And gradually he closed in.

Fan held the envelope behind her, arching back, but it was no use. Sweitzer seized her, twisting her limp wrist. The envelope fell. He picked it up; thrust it into his pocket.

"I hate to do this," he said, and his coarse face softened as he looked at Fan. "You and I might go places, if it weren't for my boss. But it's got to be a suicide pact—see?" He dragged her, unresisting, over to Breanu, and dipped for the sword. "We'll leave the details to the cops."

He held the sword awkwardly, while gripping the terrorized woman. It was a furtive creak from the dining room that released Fan. Doremus had come home. She saw his brown face staring in at them.

"Doremus!" she shrieked. She wrenched the thin blade from Fred Sweitzer, pointing it at him.

"Oh, Lawd!" mumbled Doremus, his rolling white stare on his dead master. Then he was kneeling there, moaning.

Fan stood protectively over them, her steady hand with the sword, ready to thrust. "Get out of here, Sweitzer!" she cried.

Sweitzer stepped back from her. He had, after all, the envelope for which his boss had sent him. The door slammed after him.

Doremus rose slowly from his knees. His grief flattened his face. "You done kill Mistuh Breanu," he said to Fan. He never took his eyes off the sword she held.

"No—no, Doremus, I didn't." Tears rolled from her eyes. She let the sword drop.

Sweitzer had escaped. Knuckles pounded on the front door.

Jane Rider closed her eyes, on the early Sunday train headed for Haverstraw. She never wanted to see David Farland again after the hysterical scene Fan Rubley had made at the party. Why did David have to leave with that woman?

It wasn't Breanu's fault. He had put himself out to give Jane a wonderful time in bringing her to Richard and Garrison's lovely place, among delightful guests. Then suddenly everything had been spoiled.

She hadn't been quite fair to Breanu in running off with Bill Wright. But Bill had coaxed her, and it really had been fun—in a way—to dash in and out of gay clubby spots she had never seen before. Yet under the surface of Bill's easy manner, Jane had felt his thoughts wandering.

Later, when they were having breakfast, Wright had looked drawn and worried. Patting her hand, he said, "You're a swell kid! Don't get David wrong. This terrible business of Charlie's murder is going to break soon. David wants to keep you out of it."

"I'm not a child." Her voice had been petulant.

Bill had sounded grave. "That isn't the question, Jane. I can't explain. But I do ask you to keep away from anyone you don't know very well. What about that writer chap Helm who lives opposite you? See much of him?"

Why had Bill asked that? Jane gave a glance at the passing landscape—every acre carrying her nearer home. Her old distrust of Kurt Helm flashed in and out of her mind. What harm could there have been in telling Bill all that Kurt had done for her? Getting her a job with the Givens; something worth while and apparently patriotic. Yes, she had told Bill all about it, ending bitterly:

"After all, David and I might have been happy if we hadn't been dragged into this murder. If Slagan hadn't fired David, and the library hadn't politely given me a vacation, because of all the publicity, we needn't have got mixed up with so many people. We could have minded our own business."

Well, there was no sense in tormenting herself. . . . Haverstraw and home at last.

Jane ran up the path, calling, "Mother!" Timmy, the pup, galloped around the side of the house, ecstatic in welcome. Mrs. Rider flung open the front door. Her arms welcomed Jane.

Then, surprisingly, Ed Blagden strolled out in his trooper's uniform. "I dropped in," he offered, a shade too casually. "Thought you might be home this morning."

"Oh, I'm so glad to be back!" Jane cried. "Is there any coffee ready, Mother?"

There was; also a fresh supply of Mrs. Rider's famous popovers. They went back into the sunny kitchen. Ed sat down opposite Jane at the glistening table. He crossed his long legs.

"You had us plenty bothered, Jane," he said abruptly.

Jane gave him a startled glance. Her mother straightened from the stove. "Leave the child alone, Ed," she rebuked. "I knew she was all right." But her eyes gave her away.

She hadn't known. "You see, dear, Mr. Garrison called up very late last night. He—"

Jane pushed back her coffee cup, and sprang up. "I can't see why he did," she said, flushing. "Bill Wright and I—you remember Bill, Mother—left the party early. We visited several night—restaurants and had a most enjoyable time."

Ed Blagden hooked his fingers in his belt, and rose. "Where was Farland?"

"Why he—?" Jane faltered.

"And Mattila Breanu?" The trooper's eyes were hard.

Mrs. Rider objected. "Can't you see Jane's tired, Ed?"

Jane said gently, "It's all right, Mother."

Ed patted her on the shoulder. "Forget it." He grinned lop-sidedly. "I'll be seeing you." He stooped to pat Timmy, and went out.

Jane felt as if she would never get enough sleep, but she was awake at six Monday morning. The telephone rang at seven. She answered, her mother anxiously beside her. It was David. His voice sounded husky and far away. Jane listened a long time, her knuckles whitening on the receiver. Then she said, "You must stick by Fan, David. Don't come out here." She hung up.

She turned to her mother. "Something dreadful has happened, Mother. Mr. Breanu was found dead, in his apartment, late last night. And they've arrested Fan Rubley; found her there—red-handed." Jane tried to swallow, couldn't. "She says she killed herself because the FBI men were after him for something or other. She says she told Attorney Garrison what he was doing. She says—?" Jane couldn't go on. She was shaking from head to foot.

"Don't get yourself all upset, darling," Mrs. Rider pleaded, looking at Jane's feverish cheeks. She was, herself, deeply shocked. Mr. Breanu had seemed such a nice man.

"Please, Mother, leave me alone for a while." Jane ran up to her room. She didn't answer when David telephoned later. Mrs. Rider took the call.

"I'll be out there as soon as I can," he said, and added harshly, "Be sure, Mrs. Rider, to keep Jane at home."

Mrs. George Marconi, Langhorne, on July 24. He also stole a quantity of jewelry.

Newkirk, a private in the 114th Infantry, 44th Division, Fort Dix, N. J., was dishonorably discharged from the Army after he had been arrested and charged with a felony.

During the trial yesterday it was brought out that Newkirk knew the Marconi family and that, while they were away from home, committed the offense. When arrested he was wearing the stolen suit, which he told the Court he "borrowed."

The official record from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, United States Department of Justice, shows that Newkirk had been arrested on seven previous occasions for incorrigibility, being a tramp, vagrancy, violation of parole, being a fugitive from justice, larceny and burglary. He had been arrested on previous occasions at Penns Grove, N. J.; Dunkirk, N. Y.; Rochester, N. Y.; and had served time in Rahway, N. J., Reformatory, and in Wilmington, Del.

How Newkirk got into the United States Army with the long criminal record that he possesses, could not be learned at the time of trial.

All counties east of the Potter county north-south line are to participate in the Easton conference, with Frank Barnako, Bangor, in charge. High party leaders have been invited to attend the conclaves.

Roosevelt To Sign New Tax Bill Today

Washington, Sept. 18.—With President Roosevelt expected to sign into law today the new $3,553,400,000 tax bill, Sen. George D. Ga., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, forecast enactment of another measure raising additional huge sums next year.

The huge new revenue measure, finally approved by Congress after a five-month legislative struggle, becomes effective almost immediately.

Increased corporate and individual income taxes under the record measure will be payable next spring on current incomes, and the new and increased excise levies take effect Oct. 1.

Individual income taxes are increased by $1,144,600,000 by lowered exemptions and boosted rates. Exemptions for married persons are lowered from $2,000 to $1,500 and those for single persons are dropped from $800 to $750.

Hitting hardest at the lower and middle brackets, the bill imposes surtaxes ranging from six per cent almost at the very bottom to 77 per cent at the top. These new taxes will be computed in addition to existing imposts, doubling and even tripling lower bracket payments.

The individual income taxpayers, George indicated, may escape a heavy blow in the next tax bill. He said that new sources of revenue must be explored.

"All indications are that we will have to have a bill yielding more money next year, but it cannot be stated definitely and no one can tell yet just what effect the defense program will have on business," he said.

Second Army Sorely Beset On Maneuvers

In the Field with the Third Army in Louisiana, Sept. 18.—Threat of a second parachute attack today gave added impetus to the drive of Lieut. Gen. Krueger's Third Army against the sorely-beset troops of the Second Army.

Even while rumors of a second attack spread, reports seeped back across the front of the havoc caused by 120 paratroopers who leaped from 13 transports and landed in a cotton patch near Clarence, far back of the Red lines.

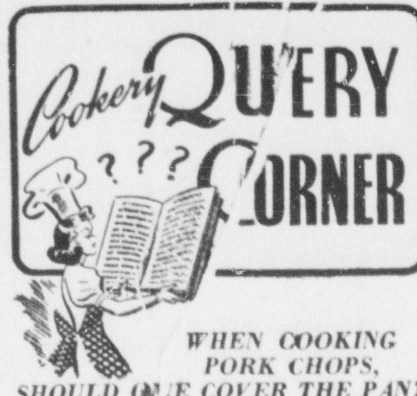

While the Third Army troops were roaming behind enemy lines, reports of their exploits began creeping in. One group captured Red trucks and played hob with supplies and communications, while another group stopped Red engineers from building a pontoon bridge.

The 'chutists took their jump so seriously that several actual fist fights were reported shortly after the landings.

WHEN COOKING PORK CHOPS, SHOULD ONE COVER THE PAN?

Yes, pork chops should be covered after the initial browning. Pork chops and pork steaks are best cooked by braising, that is, by cooking in moist heat. Therefore after they have been browned, cover the pan closely so that they may cook in the steam which surrounds them. Cook them slowly and thoroughly.

HOW CAN I KEEP BANANAS FROM SLIDING OFF BRO. LING RACK?

To broil bananas in a lamb chop grill, place them in a pan on the rack. Put the pan on the broiler when you turn the chops after they have been browned on one side. The bananas require only half as long to cook as do the chops.

Army Men Say

Nothing makes a selective service man in camp happier than a letter from home or a home-town newspaper in the daily mail, army officials said recently after an extensive survey.

Next in order, the selective service youth likes sweets such as candy, cookies and chocolates—and chewing gum!

Officers say that on the march the gum helps keep the boys from drinking too much water and from dipping into their lunch ration.

Other offerings which bring a smile of pleasure to the enrollee include a general repertoire of utilities among which are books of stamps, flashlights, a towel now and then, toilet articles, and reading materials.

Officers say that if relatives want to be sure their addressee gets what's mailed to him, they should address the letter or package in this way: Name first, his company or battery second, his regiment third, and, lastly the name of the post office.

Doyle Gets Year in Jail And Must Pay Costs of Case

the other car, testified he saw the defendant's car coming toward him and swerve over, sideswiping his car, and then proceed for a short distance before stopping. "I stopped my car, got out, and when I got to the defendant's car he was standing in front of it."

Robert Anderson testified he saw the defendant lying flat on his back in a flower bed in the show gardens. "When I got him up he said something about Tony was driving it," said Anderson.

Rudolph Shively, who lived two doors away from the scene of the crash, said he looked around in the flower garden for Tony, but was unable to find him.

Judge Boyer, who read the defendant's record before setting the bail, said it warranted making the bail $2,000.

Two brothers, John Weidman, 23, Oakford, who was convicted of assault and battery, and Charles Weidman, 18, of Oakford, who was acquitted, went on trial before Judge Calvin S. Boyer on Monday afternoon.

The jury, which deliberated more than an hour, found the older brother, John, guilty but recommended leniency, and acquitted the younger of charges growing out of an attack on Walter Hilsbos, Jr., 15, Neeshamby Falls, following the shouting of an insult.

Judge Boyer, who suspended sentence and placed Weidman on probation subject to his call into the United States Army today, directed that the cost of prosecution be paid in installments of not less than $10. The costs amounted to more than $40.

"The jury returned a proper and discriminating verdict because you were old enough to know better," warned Judge Boyer. "Because some one shouted an insult at you, or you thought he did, was no reason to get out of your car and pick a fight with a 15-year-old boy."

"The whole thing was very foolish because you are too old for such conduct. You were the oldest and yet you were the ringleader," Judge Boyer said.

The Oakland youth, who is unemployed, told the Court he was leaving for the army today. "That complicates matters," said Judge Boyer.

Walter A. Hilsbos, Jr., 15, Neeshamby, said he and two of his friends, Thomas Surowicz, 15, and Harry Dudek, 16, were walking along Bristol Road, under the railroad bridge, when a car came along and forced them into the ditch. "One of us shouted 'get that old cratch off the road!'"

Hilsbos, who testified he was beaten up and kicked by Weidman, said John struck him first and later kicked him.

John, the defendant, who was riding in a car with William and Frank Baker, John McAndrew and his brother, testified he heard some one shout an insult at them as their car passed the trio of youths.

"I thought I heard some one call 'You son of a—' and I told William Baker to stop the car. I got out and Walter hit me first, then I hit him with my fist, but I didn't kick him," testified the older brother defendant.

The younger brother defendant, Charles, stood outside the car and watched the fight between his brother and the boys at the time.

Witnesses for the two brothers included William Baker, 18, Philadelphia, Reading Railroad Company employee, who was driving the car; John McAndrew, 15, Oakford, who said he didn't get out of the car but watched the fight through the rear window; and Edward Goetz, 15, Oakford, who testified he was arrested by Hilsbos' father mistakenly and was not with the boys at the time.

Frank Baker, one of the boys in the car at the time of the fracas, is employed in Maryland, and was not able to attend the trial.

Myron W. Harris, Langhorne, counsel for the two brothers, described the fight as a red-blooded boys' fight and said not one of the boys had ever been in any previous trouble.

The jury was composed of Harvey D. Hunsberger, Plumsteadville; Frances R. Nye, Shelly; Arthur Giberson, Reisterstown; Henry E. Yoder, Perkasie; Benjamin S. Sellers, Ottsville; R. D. J. Arthur, B. Moyer, Perkasie; Anton Schaeffer, Bucksville; Victor K. Fluck, Quakertown, R. D. 3; Adeline L. Kelly, Chalfont, R. D. 3; Harvey M. Hillebrand, Quakertown; Benjamin Bennett, Jamison; Arthur Treffinger, Sr., Quakertown.

Levi Wayne Hangey, of near Quakertown, was convicted yesterday of molesting a child. He applied for a new trial, but his attorney, William Freed, very new and profitable, dentures in of Quakertown, and was released under double his original bail, amounting to $1800. The case was tried before Judge Hiram H. Keller.

Before a jury in Judge Keller's Court, Luther McKinney, of Trenton, Negro, went on trial charged with driving while drunk on Route 13 between Morrisville and Bristol on June 13th at 3:45 a. m., where an accident occurred.

Private Shovelin, of the South Langhorne sub-station of Motor Police, testified that he smelled the odor of alcohol on McKinney's breath and that in his opinion the defendant "was under the influence of intoxicating liquor." The officer testified that McKinney told him he had taken one glass of beer in Trenton.

Dr. Theodore Cohen, Morrisville, osteopathic physician, examined McKinney after the accident. McKinney testified. He denied that he had made the statement that he did not believe that McKinney was drunk.

Mrs. Marian Cutchinal, of Tullytown, testified that the car she was driving, was struck by the defendant's car and that in her opinion, McKinney was drunk.

Justice of the Peace John Melvin, of Falls township, testified that at the hearing before him, McKinney asked to plead guilty.

The Commonwealth closed at 11:50 a. m.

At this point the defendant, upon his attorney's advice, changed his plea to guilty.

The jury called and excused included: Robert E. Green, Morrisville; Mary E. VanHart, Washington Crossing; Arthur Shull, Point Pleasant; Warren Heacock, Fountainville; Edwin C. Yoder, Perkasie; Peter E. Johnson, Bristol R. D.; Arthur B. Moyer, Perkasie; Charles C. Ford, Bristol; John C. Busche, Sr., Morrisville; Victor K. Fluck, Quakertown R. D. 2; Isaac VanPelt, New Hope; J. Franklin Johnson, Doylestown.

The defendant McKinney told Judge Keller that he had two beers in Trenton and the accident happened two hours later. He told the Court that he is regularly employed and is married and has two children.

McKinney told the Court that he has never been drunk and was not drunk the night of the accident.

Thomas E. Clazzo, 518 S. Clinton street, Trenton, real estate operator and McKinney's landlord, appeared as a character witness for McKinney. A son of this witness also testified.

McKinney was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and costs and a prison sentence of two months to one year was suspended on condition that he pay the fine and costs and the damage to the automobile that he hit in the accident.

A divorce was granted by Judge Keller to Mrs. Ruth B. Hilsbos, 126 Shewell avenue, Doylestown, from Edward E. Hilsbos, Jr., of 57 West Oakland avenue, Doylestown, on grounds of desertion. They were married November 13, 1937, in Belair, Md.

"In many cases huge presses of many tons are necessary for production molds. I will attempt to tell you about two main types of molding operations."

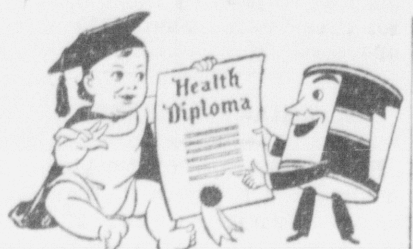

"The first molding operation that I wish to show is the injection molding type. Injection molding is just what the name implies. The molding powder (granules) better for this type—no (plugging) is softened to a melt and is injected into a cavity—the cavity being the object desired."

"The second important type of molding is the compression type. Once again, it is just what the name implies. The molding powder is placed in the mold cavity. The powder is heated and pressure applied after a time interval is allowed. The particles fuse and the mold is then cooled. The machine is opened and the object is removed."

PRIZED POSSESSION

Good eating habits are one of the important backgrounds for good health. They are formed at an early age, and if you teach your child to like the foods which are rich in the vitamins and minerals, thus promoting his good health and enjoyment of life, you are giving him one of the world's most prized possessions.

This campaign for your child's health should be started as soon as he is born, of course. Keep him under a doctor's care to be sure his schedule of feeding and his formulas are right at all times. At four to six months, the age when many doctors recommend strained foods in the child's diet, you will find the prepared strained foods are a great help in starting your baby to learn to like the vegetables, fruits and cereals which are so good for him.

One reason so many doctors start a child on the strained foods as soon as he can take them is that recent research has proven that an infant's body becomes deficient in iron a few months after his birth and this iron is not replaced by his usual milk and orange juice diet. Also, the child has an increased vitamin need after a few months, and he should have a mild, non-irritating form of bulk in his diet.

Naturally, the strained foods which are given to the infant should be prepared with the greatest care to insure good flavors and the highest nutritional values—a reason the prepared strained foods which come in cans are so highly recommended, for they are prepared according to specially developed scientific processes with special equipment which could not be duplicated in homes. Enamel linings are used in the tins to prevent possible flavor defect or discoloration.

Fourteen different kinds of the prepared strained foods give you ample variety with which to start your child on his first adventures in good eating. Strained cereal is often the first one recommended for the child. Strained peas, strained mixed greens, strained beef and liver soup and strained apricots and apple sauce are also among the earliest additions to the baby's diet because of their iron content and richness in important vitamins.

Strained carrots, spinach, tomato soup, vegetable soup (with cereal and yeast concentrate), green beans, prunes, beets, pears and pineapple and strained asparagus complete the list of prepared strained foods which help teach the baby good eating habits and promote his nutritional well-being. The strained cereal comes in a 10-oz. tin, while the strained prunes are in a 5-oz. tin and the remaining 12 varieties are packed in 4½-oz. tins.

To be sure the child develops no prejudices against new foods, he should be started on his strained foods gradually. A small quantity such as a teaspoon may be diluted with water or milk for his first strained foods feeding. The quantities should be increased a little at a time and the proportion of liquid reduced and finally dispensed with. Soon the child is taking a full 4½-oz. tin at 10 to 12 months of age.

Many questions are asked as to whether it is safe to keep the foods that are left over in the opened tins. The answer is that the canned strained foods may remain safely in the enameled tin, if properly chilled, for serving the second day. Just cover the tin with clean waxed paper or a sterilized rubber bottle cap. When kept well protected from any contamination in a refrigerator which has a constant temperature below 45 degrees, these foods may be held safely for as long as six days.

The good effects of the strained foods on the child's eating habits are, of course, not noticeable until he starts eating with the family and is given adult food. Then it is that you discover that Junior already likes carrots, spinach and other of the good foods he needs for healthy growth, and he needs no urging to carry on with the eating habits you instilled in him when he was less than a year old.

the past were made of hard rubber. These were not very satisfactory and resulted in poor fits, bad color, and numerous difficulties. Dentures made from Crystallite are stable and durable, non-toxic, and free from change of shape. The natural color matching is very close. Also, the dental technician finds Crystallite readily workable and moldable.

"Acrylic teeth are also made from Crystallite. This use of Crystallite offers little volume sale of powder because thousands of teeth could be made from a few pounds. However, the contribution to humanity is tremendous."

"Increasingly important is the use of plastics in the interior decoration and other details of the modern automobile. The popularity of plastics in this field has come swiftly. Only within recent years, for example, has it been deemed possible to mold as complicated an object as a steering wheel. Now plastics are considered better than any other material for this purpose."

"The experience of the last few years indicates what may be expected in the future. Already, these pieces formed of plastics are going into the automobile: steering wheels, horn buttons, gear shift balls, instrument board parts, control knobs, instrument cluster faces, dome light lenses, hardware, knobs and escutcheons and all sorts of minor pieces."

"Future developments will probably be in the exterior of cars. These transparent resins show more resistance to ultra-violet light than any plastic yet made and lend themselves wonderfully to both transparent and opaque color. I believe that the public will stand ready to welcome any use in the automobile that can be made of plastics."

The following special committees were announced for the year:

Miss Young's supporting cast includes such well known players as Robert Preston, Edward Arnold, Gladys George, Frank Craven, Jessie Ralph, Stanley Fields, Samuel S. Hinds, Willie Best and others.

In the first "Western" role of her career, Miss Young is seen as a naive but determined Philadelphia girl who comes out to Wyoming to make her fortune. She crosses swords with a gang of crooked politicians headed by Arnold and Preston, and her mounting conflict is paced by a romance that springs up between her and Preston.

BRISTOL THEATRE

Brilliantly conceived, masterfully executed, and beautifully paced, "Blood and Sand" opened last night at the Bristol Theatre to a packed house, and it is one to judge by its reception, it is an assuring hit.

Starring Tyrone Power who contributes an inspired performance, the film was produced by Darryl F. Zanuck in blazing Technicolor. Based on the famous novel by Vicente Blasco Ibanez, "Blood and Sand" features Linda Darnell and Rita Hayworth at the head of a star-studded cast.

RITZ THEATRE

Tommy Kelly, known in Hollywood as the Tom Sawyer of the screen, appears in a supporting role in "Double Date," which comes to the Ritz Theatre today.

Boris Karloff, screen horror man, is currently starring in Monogram's "The Ape," now playing at the Ritz Theatre.

FOOTBALL SEASON NEARS AS SCHOOLS HIT FINAL STAGES, PRE-SEASON CONDITIONING PROGRAMS PRIOR TO OPENING 1941 YEAR

By Jack Gill

The thud of a husky-built boy's toe against an inflated piece of leather will officially usher forth the 1941 local football season. From thence on a hundred throats will cheer or jeer as climax plays click from the ten-yard line, or as Johnny Jones drops a picture pass on the fifteen.

High schools have been hard hit. Youthful coaches, usually the most enthusiastic as well as successful, have been drafted into military service, thereby necessitating drastic changes in personnel. These alterations will undoubtedly be felt during the early stages of the season.

A severe infantile paralysis epidemic will lessen the calibre of play in the nearby Bux-Mont conference. Late practice starts by such schools as Jenkintown, Doylestown, Lansdale, etc., will spill forth a sad story to the keen grid analyst.

Rule changes are but few. The high schools, however, will be a part and parcel of the new rule lifting the limitations on the number of times a player may return to a game during one quarter.

Hot debate has entwined that new gesture on the part of the rules committee. It was first devised to aid the smaller schools and colleges. But smart coaches plan to use it to greater advantage. Outstanding offensive players will be immediately lifted after the team possessing the ball loses the spheroid, and in will rush a host of "pug-ugly" gorillas to man the defense. They'll shuttle back and forth all afternoon, creating a longer day at the field for Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Q. Fan. The Q, by the way, is for quarterback, for what fan isn't a play caller and strategist?

Outside of that one great universal change, the only other major rule alteration in Pennsylvania high school ranks is the one that brings the fourth down pass behind the goal line out to a position from where the play originated instead of on the 20-yard line. This is expected to erase the fear that once existed during dubious moments.

MULHOLLAND PLANS A PRO-FOOTBALL TEAM

Johnny Mulholland, who has been associated with sports in Bristol for the past 40 years, is busy laying plans for a fast semi-professional football team to represent Bristol. The head of the Bristol A. A. recently received a call from Eddie Gottlieb, Philadelphia's well known booking agent, asking him if he could field such a team.

According to Mulholland, the aggregation would feature about five local players. The remainder of the cast would be composed of imported stars from the Philadelphia and Trenton areas. All members of the team would receive compensation for their services.

The list of teams lined up for the proposed eleven are: Conshohocken, Seymour, Atlantic City, Chambersburg and other top-notch foes.

The Bristol manager intends to go through with his club in an efficient manner. Realizing that such opposition requires outstanding football talent, he is busy rounding up aces for his squad. He is being assisted in this work by friends in Philadelphia and South Jersey.

Mulholland is well known for his old football teams that appeared in Bristol up until 1922. Such oldsters as Joe Holmes, Bob Cart, String Fellow, Heck Vandegrift, John Conca, Dom Dougherty, Ed Roe, Al Bauers, Matt Lank and others played on teams managed by him.

A few of the local players whom Mulholland stated he would invite to try out for his newest athletic venture are Tom Profy, Teddy Sak and Johnnie Dougherty. The rest will be out

Dr. R. V. Boucher, associate professor of agriculture and biological chemistry at Pennsylvania State College, spoke on the "Factors in Feeding for Growth, High Egg Production and Hatchability."

Following the program the poultrymen enjoyed a tour of the Farm School.

The Union Fire Ladies' Auxiliary of Morrisville will hold its next session on September 24th, at the home of Mrs. Anna Leonard, of Emilie, when a "doggie" roast will follow the business meeting. Cars will leave the fire house at seven o'clock that evening.

Several members recently attended a covered dish supper at the home of Mrs. Alex Lynn, the former Miss Agnes McCue, of Bristol. Those attending included: Anna Leonard, Edna Frye, Catherine Mattis, Elizabeth Larson, Mrs. McClister, Agnes Hilborn, Mary Carr, Edna Wilmet, Dorothy Burns, Lettie Kemble, Anna Wharton, Anna Ahlum, Mrs. Haberly, Julia Smith, Mrs. Robert Wenner, Anna Bruce, Jean Hutchinson, Mary Hibbs, Agnes Lynn, Blanche Riggs, Alice McCue, Anna Reeh, Sr., Anna Reeh, Jr., Anna Mae Hensor, Martha Ossman, Irene Hibbs, Myrtle Wilmet and Betty Wilmet.

"Out of the Frying Pan" To Be Staged at Yardley

YARDLEY, Sept. 18.—Yardley Theatre will present last season's farce hit of youthful stage aspirants, "Out of the Frying Pan," the week of September 22nd. This delightful comedy by Francis Swann, opened on Broadway with very little of the usual fanfare and advance publicity. It was an instantaneous success and made starring names of Barbara Bel-Geddes, Alfred Drake and Florence McMichael. As a play, "Out of the Frying Pan" is an unusual combination of fast-moving situations and witty lines.

It is also plenty funny and acted by a youthful cast with disarming zest. Its plot consists of a communal living arrangement, for economic reasons only, whereby three struggling young actors share rooms with four youthful actresses.

Patricia Patten will play the part of Dottie, created by Barbara Bel-Geddes. Irene Brodowska, Yardley Theatre's delightful ingenue, is cast as the lovely Marge. Margaret Wallace is Mariel Foster, the doxy role which catapulted Florence McMichael to overnight fame. Katharine Bowden will play the voice student, Kate Ault. Iggie Wolfington has the comedy part of George Bodell; and the handsome young leading man, Kenneth Cooper Sloan plays Norman Reese, the brains of the group; Kurt Richards, the lovesick Tony, is the third male member of the ill-assorted menage. Kathryn Cameron has a great comedy role, as the landlady of this wacky household.

MORRISVILLE

Mrs. William L. Schofield, Jr., of 159 West Maple avenue, president of the Clara Burgess Guild of the First Presbyterian Church, will be hostess to the first Fall meeting of the guild at her home at 8 p. m., Thursday. Activities for the winter and the 25th anniversary of the guild will be discussed. Miss Leona Playfoot will assist. The program on Latin America will be led by Mrs. Earl Hartman.

Miss Josephine Messina is recuperating at her home after several months at Manor Nursing Cottage, Browns Mills.

Miss Jean White entertained at her Summer home at Seaside Park for Miss Ruth Davis, Miss Dorothy Lamsden and Miss Betty Ulrich. Frank Faust, of Huntingdon, Pa. was here for a visit with his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Emma Coy. Mrs. George T. Titus, of Sand Brook, N. J., was a luncheon guest of Mrs. P. C. Titus.

Miss Gloria Benschel will leave next week to enter Beaver College at Jenkintown.

Mr. and Mrs. William Schofield, Jr., have returned from a vacation with their sons, Bill and Bud, touring New England.

TO AWARD TROPHY TO MOST VALUABLE 'SUB' LEAGUE PLAYER

Presentation to Take Place Monday Evening at League Dinner

NOW SELECTING PLAYER

Trophy Is Also To Be Given To the Rohm & Haas Team

The most valuable player of the Bristol Suburban League will receive a trophy, according to committee plans already completed.

The award will be presented at the first annual banquet of the circuit to be held at the Lido Venice Cafe, Andalusia, Monday evening.

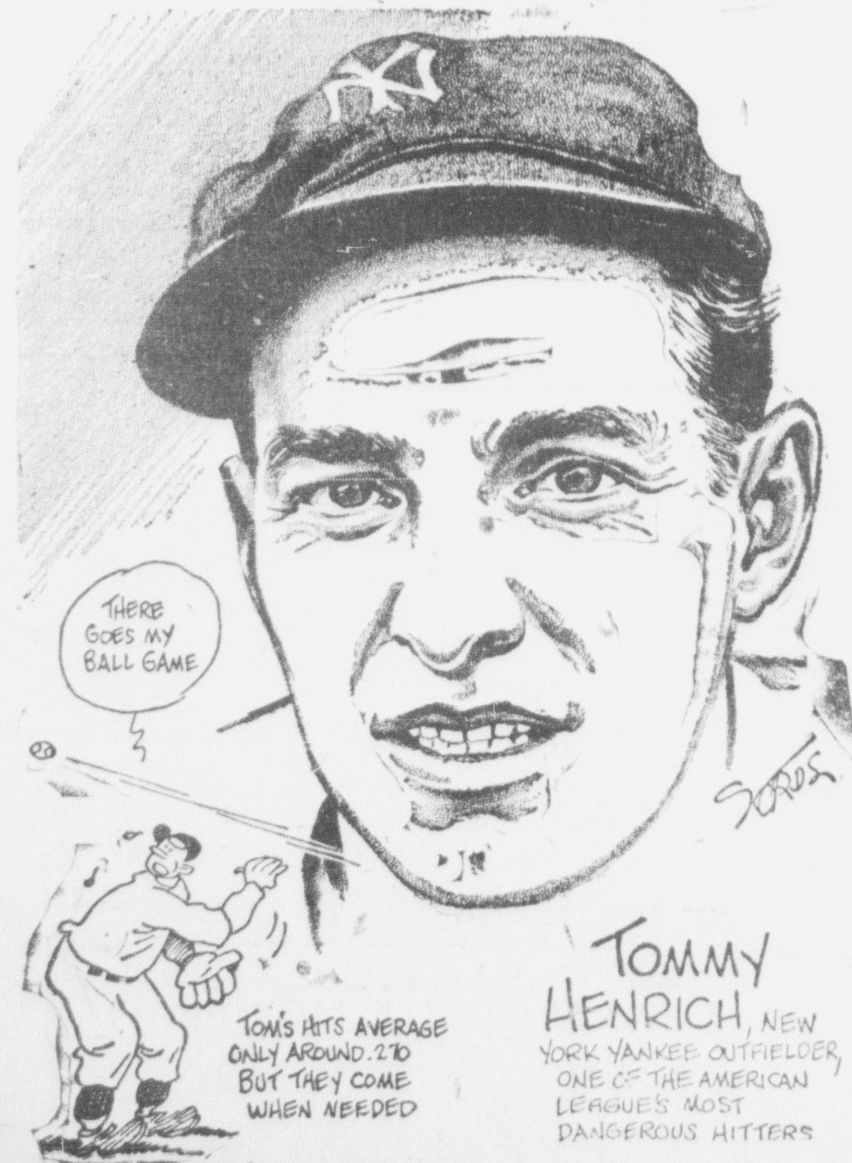

The player is being picked by the managers and the secretary of the league. Each manager is allowed the choice of five players of whom they think was the most valuable to the various clubs. First place will count for five votes; second, four, and so on. The contestant receiving the most votes will be considered the most valuable player and receive the trophy.

A large trophy will also be presented to the Rohm and Haas team, champions of the league. The chemical workers won both halves of the league. Both presentations will be made by resident Paul C. Voltz.

Almost every player in the Suburban League will be present at the affair for each team has been purchasing enough tickets for its player roster. Many followers of the local loop are also expected to be present. The banquet is a mixed affair as dancing will be held after the banquet.

The final meeting of the managers will be held tomorrow night at the
